June 2014 NCACHE News

As the end of the school year quickly approaches, we've got some tips on preparing your students for summer! Cheryl Knudson, a school counselor in South Dakota, provides several tips for seniors who are preparing for college. She encourages her students to follow up with their future school and to stay connected over the summer. For the full article, click here.

Check out the National Summer Learning Association for resources and facts about summer learning!

Summer can be a convenient time for students to visit colleges! The College Board has many resources for families and students as they prepare to visit, apply, and attend college!

Perhaps you have students ready to relax and enjoy their summer between grades. What can they do to stay involved and reduce summer learning loss? Summertime is a great opportunity for students to build their experiences through volunteering or job placements. Summer might also be the perfect time for your students to explore a topic that they are interested in. Online courses are a good option! Students can learn to play guitar, study marine biology, or improve their math skills with online learning!

The MOOC List (Massive Open Online Courses) categorizes many free online offerings.

NCACHE is committed to building strategic partnerships to strengthen our local communities through college access and success.
