

NCACHE

North Carolina Appalachian Collaborative for Higher Education

www.ncache.appstate.edu

May 2013 NCACHE News

All the kids are doing it... now you can, too! Twitter -- the online networking service which has quickly become one of the top ten most visited websites on the internet. It has been described as the "SMS (status message syndrome) of the internet." The Appalachian Higher Education (AHE) Network, which is composed of centers in nine states: Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, West Virginia and Virginia, has

<https://twitter.com/appalachiannetw>

AHE Network Twitter Handle

@AppalachianNetw

...working with schools, families, communities and diverse partners to raise the educational levels across the Appalachian region.

recently created its own Twitter account to assist in its mission of raising educational attainment levels in Appalachia. Twitter provides many wonderful benefits for organizations, like the AHE Network, who are striving to connect with schools, families, communities and diverse partners. It gives users the opportunity to receive updates and alerts for news or upcoming events. The AHE Network's new twitter account allows for easy and quick communication. So "follow" the AHE Network to join in on the discussions and take advantage of the new resources, websites, blogs and opportunities offered daily for those interested in promoting higher education!

The Appalachian Higher Education (AHE) Network

<http://iel.org/ahecenters/index.html>

North Carolina Appalachian Collaborative for Higher Education

<http://ncache.appstate.edu/>

NCACHE is committed to building strategic partnerships to strengthen our local communities through college access and success.

Jennifer Wilson-Kearse

Executive Director

828.262.8016 ext. 104

wilsonkearsejj@appstate.edu

Tracey Anne Tardiff

Pre-Enrollment Program Coordinator

828.262.8016 ext.102

tardiffat@appstate.edu