September 2014 NCACHE News

Welcome from your friends at NCACHE,

As many of you know NCACHE is a collaboration between Appalachian State University, Western Carolina University, and UNC-Asheville; our objective is to increase the number of students from Western North Carolina communities, who directly after high school continue their education.

Please email or call if we can help assist in achieving these goals locally.

Open Houses are a great ways for high school and prospective transfer students to meet faculty, current students, learn about scholarships, financial aid, and what the college community has to offer. Please encourage your students to pursue these opportunities.
